Symbios Project Newsletter Nº 15 – June 2015

News | We had the Symbios Project Final Seminar

The Symbios Project Final Technical Seminar, held in Santiago de Compostela on May 27th and 28th, served to present different innovative experiences for territorial inclusion, which guarantee the quality of life in the territories in demographic crisis. Some of them were provided by the European partners of the Symbios Project, presenting methodologies for different steps in the planning. There also were presented experiences of the European Network of Social Services, where the Government of Galicia belongs.

The Interview. Maja Ročak. CESRT-NEIMED researcher, Zuyd University of Applied Sciences

Bearing in mind the importance of managing the demographical shrinking, which aspects do you consider the most important for building up an adequate socio territorial planning?

It's important that policy makers become aware of the relevance of demographic change (ageing and population decline).
